Abstract

The word “microfinance” has gained widespread recognition today and is frequently used to refer to financially sustainable poverty reduction. However, some contend that by turning poor people into debt slaves, it makes their lives even more precarious. India has the largest number of clients linked with its microfinance sector of any country in the world, so it is important to look at the quality of this expansion. Microcredit has been blamed for suicides in India: Aggressive lending by microcredit companies in Andhra Pradesh is said to have resulted in more than hundred deaths in recent years. Most of the poor are in deep trouble due to these loans & Poor people are committing suicides because of peer pressure of the organizations for repayment. Hence Few research studies suggested Micro-credit has been changing people’s lives and revitalizing communities.

The initial driving force behind this research was to comprehend and examine the actual microfinance scenario, including its consequences, demands, and effects on the conditions of individuals in the Thane area. The goal of this
